RYAN ROBERT MULLEN is like this small barbarian warrior with big black glasses. Together his wife and himself strike out for fortunes unknown with their wee babe in the Wisconsin Northwoods. Here they live a sort of caveman existence — surviving almost solely on sharp cheese and dark beer. Ryan occasionally gets "La Loco" and drunk and scribbles some nasty stuff all over the walls. He has a book called Naughty Sweet Boy and is a Fountain Award nominee. He likes his readings to have many big laughing and have everybody saying, "Man that guy is good let me buy you a drink." www.ryanrobertmullen.net

TIM HALL worked as a porn movie soundtrack composer, cheesy dance music producer, gay moving man and live sex accompanist before turning to the big bucks of indie publishing. Tim's first novel is called Half Empty and it is about the horror of sobriety and the wonders of having your salad tossed. You can view it online at www.undiepress.com.

JENNIFER LOVEGROVE is a writer living in Toronto. Her latest book of poems is I Should Never Have Fired the Sentinel (ECW Press, 2005), which reviewers have called "edgy, surreal, innovative, thought provoking — and very, very cool...packs enough punch to knock you on your ass." Her first book, The Dagger Between Her Teeth (ECW Press, 2002) reinvents the lives of two seventeenth century female pirates, and examines the dynamics of women and violence. She publishes the literary zine dig., and chapbooks through her wayward armadillo press, and occasionally teaches DIY publishing workshops. Meanwhile, she makes and sells pornographic soap called Soap Scum, and plays hockey. www.jenniferlovegrove.com
